THE LATEST ON ONLINE LEARNING AT AISN!

Use Your Relationships: Figure Things Out Together: Trying new things can be frustrating. This past week at AISN, an 8th grade middle school student virtually helped a 6th and 7th grade student figure out how to post pictures on their Google Drive account with the following email message:

1. Open up your assignment and go to add/create and press it.
2. Then, if you had taken the picture through your computer, press files and then select your file.
3. Then there will be an upload button at the bottom, press that. You can post unlimited pictures.
4. Once you finish, just press turn in.

This is a fine example of a learner relationship. You have relationships, too. Don't hesitate to ask for help during this time of transition - from an AISN student, teacher, or parent!

Zoom Video Conferences: Help to keep AISN classes connected from our youngest students to our oldest students - as well as all our teachers!

Flip Grid: Encourages active AISN student engagement and collaboration with each other and their teachers through online video conversations centered on specific topics.
